

CPLEA is pleased to announce the following important additions to our staff and Board of Directors.

Nathalie Trembley will be joining CPLEA's staff as our new Educational Design & Evaluation Specialist. Nathalie is an education professional with more than two decades of experience in various positions involving progressive levels of responsibility. Her professional journey extends from children to adults as well as from the community to the government level. She comes to CPLEA with a valuable combination of qualified expertise, life experience, education and an unwavering belief in the importance of providing Albertans with the information they need to navigate the justice system. Nathalie has most recently worked with Alberta Justice as Manager of Public Legal Education and Information Services.

Jared Bielby has joined CPLEA's Board of Directors. Jared is the Chair of the International Center for Information Ethics and editor-in-chief for the International Review of Information Ethics. He is an active consultant and project manager for initiatives in information ethics and internet governance. Jared organizes research and data analysis working groups in ethics, and leads interdisciplinary and intersectoral AI ethics research for the Kule Institute for Advanced Study at the University of Alberta. He also chairs the IEEE Global AI Ethics Initiative committee on Classical Ethics in Autonomous and Intelligent Systems. Jared currently works for the city of Edmonton as the city Data and Analytics Ethics Advisor.

Ken Proudman has joined CPLEA's Board of Directors. Ken is an Edmonton based lawyer whose practice consists primarily of divorces and separations where there are businesses, farms, complex property, tax issues, appeals, legal research, or pre-nuptial agreements. Ken was named one of the "Top 3 Divorce Lawyers" in Edmonton in 2018 by ThreeBestRated and has received an A+ rating from the Better Business Bureau. Much of Ken's time outside of the office is devoted to his passion, teaching. Ken is employed by the University of Alberta Faculty Of Law as a sessional instructor, teaching Advanced Family Law. He teaches other lawyers through seminars for the Legal Education Society of Alberta and the Canadian Bar Association and teaches the public about family law topics through many different channels.
