

Who are we?

We are a public legal education organization that provides legal information, education, training, research and consulting services. Our team includes lawyers, librarians, and educators; complimented with communications, technology and administrative specialists; rounded out with countless volunteers offering a vast wealth of knowledge and skills.

We are a non-profit charity and have been active since 1975.

Who is our main audience?

At CPLEA we strive to reach anyone looking for legal information with a special focus on vulnerable populations – people who do not have easy access to legal information due to their financial, social, political and/or cultural circumstances. To help us reach this goal we work closely with intermediaries – professionals and community leaders who help and teach other people - as well as community groups.

We believe that access to understandable information about laws and legal processes should be the right of everyone in a free society
